

Feminism and International Law Interest Group Activity Report

2016/17

The interest group had a successful meeting with seven papers presented at the ESIL conference in Naples 2017, under the theme 'Whose Global Public Goods, Global Commons and Fundamental Values?'. The first panel focused on economic and social justice and queer approaches; the second panel addressed feminist approaches to the environment and nonhuman animal; the final panel considered women's representation and transformative potential. Panellists travelled from as far as Montreal, Malaga and London, and we enjoyed a really rich discussion, which continued into the evening at our social event.

The interest group will not be holding an event at the Research Forum at the Hebrew University next year. However, exciting plans are underway for the Manchester Conference 2018, where we will hold a number of panels and networking events.

The membership of the interest group has grown substantially and now consists of 194 members from the larger ESIL membership. The coordinating committee remains the same at this present time, but elections for coordinating committee members will be held in 2018.
